

PATRICK GARBIN is a freelance writer, editor, and researcher. He has earned the reputation as an authority and historian of college football, especially Georgia Bulldogs football. Patrick has written four books on University of Georgia football with the latest (Historic Photos of University of Georgia Football, Turner Publishing) being released August 2010. He has also been a consultant/researcher for several other football-related book projects. Patrick maintains the About Them Dawgs! Blawg— the only blog on the Internet primarily dedicated to the rich history and tradition of Georgia’s football program.

Patrick currently contributes freelance articles to Covers.com, is a Featured Columnist for the Bleacher Report, and blogs for PhilSteele.com. He has also worked at FanStop.com as a Senior Staff Writer and CNN Sports Illustrated and CNN Sports. For more information on Patrick and his work, please visit his website at www.patrickgarbin.com and blog at www.patrickgarbin.blogspot.com.